

PRATFALL

Philippe Starck,

Driade reissues the lounge chair designed by Philippe Starck in 1984 as part of the famous and iconic Costes series from which it takes its unmistakable characteristics: an enveloping wooden shell and three strongly inclined legs. A small armchair with a strong personality, with an enveloping and comfortable seat, which connotes the most elegant environments both in a domestic dimension and in the hotel industry. In addition to being reproduced in the same materials and upholstery as Costes, Pratifall is offered in a wide range of new combinations and matches between different curved plywood shells and leather upholstery.

Armchair with tubular steel frame painted with polyester powder in the colour mica anthracite grey, with shell in curved plywood lacquered black closed pore Seat cushion with polyurethane foam padding with differentiated density covered in black leather.
