An art connoisseur with charisma

Gallery is an elegant pendant and wall lamp offering atmospheric lighting, inspired by the subdued atmosphere often experienced in galleries and museums. In the design process, Kristian Sofus Hansen and Tommy Hyldahl have worked with travertine and how to infuse a lightness to an otherwise heavy material.

At first glance, the Gallery lamp may appear massive and heavy due to the travertine material. But upon closer look, it is crafted from thin travertine plates, almost resembling folded paper, which imparts a sense of lightness to the expression. This origami inspired expression is made possible by using a thin metal plate on the inside of the lamp's travertine plates. In general the playful contrast between a heavy material and light expression is a characteristic design feature for several NORR11 furniture pieces.

But the Gallery lamp is more than just a light source. A narrow opening at the bottom of the lamp provides gentle downward lighting, while its primary function is to spread light upwards, creating an atmospheric glow that enhances the room's ambiance. The Gallery lamp can be combined in various ways and set up together or separately, depending on the preferred atmosphere.

True to its name, Gallery is designed to be a small work of art in itself. Its shape and contrast between the bright travertine and the black metal imbue the lamp with a sharp, architectural expression. Whether hung individually for a minimalist aesthetic or clustered together in various heights and positions, it lends itself to creating sculptural and artistic installations.
